"The day is past when the best education can be offered in out-of-date buildings and facilities," Howell L. Watkins, county superintendent of public instruction, told an audience assembled at the corner stone laying and dedication of the new high school building Thursday afternoon in front of the foundation.

The Grand Lodge of the state of Florida F. and A. M. conducted a service yesterday morning for an audience of school board members, faculty, students and public.

Pointing to the growth of the high school and to construction of the new building, Watkins listed the rapid expansion phases of the local school.

"In 1929, the first old school building was built; in 1932, a new one; in 1932, an equal addition was erected; in 1937, a large addition was built; in 1941 a portico was added and contract was let for the present building; in 1946 an addition was added; in 1949 class rooms were added and in 1951 construction of the

Lindrose Heads Scrap Metal Drive

An all out scrap metal drive was launched here last Friday under the leadership of E. A. Lindrose, local chairman in the county-wide metal mobilization campaign of the Resources Development Board, according to John Blackmer, county chairman.

Other area chairmen are: F. G. Evans, Loxahatchee; W. A. Dobrow, Pahokee and W. A. Cross, Canal Point.

A general meeting of all community chairmen was held at the Pahokee Fire Department Friday afternoon when R. B. Gibson of Jacksonville, head of the state organization for scrap mobilization, explained the "nation's needs in scrap metal" and the importance of getting the public involved in the defense program going forward."

"Production authorities have informed us that steel mills and foundries are being driven to a dangerous short supply of scrap," he said, "and although Florida is not an industrial state, we believe there are areas where we can help." He urged the public to be undiscriminating in the use of good scrap, particularly in the farm areas.

Edward W. Grib of Lake Worth, who served as national chairman of salvage during World War II, recently been drafted to assume the same position with the National Production Authority. During a recent visit to the area, he advised that the need for scrap materials in defense production is at least 50 percent greater than at any time during the last war.

MUCH TO DO IN '52

In the year 1950 there was a city located near the largest body of water entirely within the boundaries of the United States. This city was situated in the midst of the richest soil in the nation and in a climate which boasted eternal summer. Its potential was great.

But this city, which was also on the inland water way across the state which traveled by freight and passenger craft, had no port or docking facilities and after traffic passed it by.

Crop dusters who offered protection against everlasting insects and pests flew their planes from a rough, faulty airport. During inclement weather they lost valuable flying hours.

When new owners entered the city, they remained confused for some time before becoming acquainted with the civic organizations and activities of the city.

Growers were worried because in the process of construction the gigantic water control project was causing temporary but sometimes disastrous effects to their lands. Those of individual sections had their fears and doubts but these never were given to the official records and action.

At the festive Christmas time, many of the residents flocked into nearby large cities to take their children to Santa Claus and inform him of their hearty desires.

But in the year 1951 all of this took place in this city.

A group of leaders appeared before the Internal Improvement Committee in Tallahassee and obtained land near Terry Island for the construction of a port and docking facilities. Through persistent efforts they achieved a promise of backing and support from the Palm Beach Port Authority and authorized the city to go forward with immediate plans.

Early in the year 1952 the plans advanced so he completed his drafts and the plans were ready for local approval before being presented to the Port Authority for prompt action.

Leaders negotiated with the Civil Aeronautics Administration for a program of air routes and landing strips across Florida and carried on their activities uninterrupted. At a special meeting the city and county agreed to stand a share of the expense if the administration would meet their combined sum. Although the airport story became involved when the necessary federal funds were not appropriated, the group was not deterred and stood on a platform to gather vital data to illustrate the imperative need for the improvement to the high officials.

Special pamphlets were published and distributed to city new comers, listing and explaining the activities and groups of the city.

Businessmen and landowners gathered at several organized meetings putting together their problems, suggestions and questions concerning water control. Engineers of the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District met in the city with this group and discussed these specific questions and took under consideration the problems and requests. This all paved the way for a big meeting in the future when the U. S. Engineers would be present.

As Christmas many more people remained at home preparing their local activities, for the year was a "Christmas Year." The streets of the city and the streets were decked with brilliant lights, store windows were attractively trimmed under the stimulation of a local contest and the notes of Christmas music filled the air.

The local chamber of commerce is the author of this history of the growth, the backing and action on these and other civic accomplishments.

Knowing that progress never stands still and that it doesn't continue forward it will slide back, this local body realizes there is still "much to do in '52." It knows that the city's tremendous potential has not been fulfilled and that today's triumphs are tomorrow's trials.

Again the chamber is organizing for its annual membership drive. The drive itself marks a phase of progress this year. Differing from drives in past years, the drive this year will be conducted and completed in one month. On the day before the drive begins who are most anxious to draw the attention of under-captains, will leave their businesses and devote their energies to obtaining memberships for this important organization. They will impress upon every business house and resident how vitally important it is for everyone to support and back the local chamber.

They will remind that, "For the lack of a nail the shoe was lost; for the lack of a shoe the horse was lost; for the lack of a horse the rider was lost; for the lack of a rider the battle was lost and for the lack of victory the war was lost." Likewise, for the lack of unani-mous support and interest in the chamber and civic developments, the bright future, which natural advantages have promised, may be lost to our city.

Teenagers Speak

by Betty Lou Scarborough and Inez Lanier

Editor's Note: Two girls who are students in my office, have written on the views and thoughts of teenagers. This article has been written on the subject by two students in my office. The first student, Betty Lou, is a girl in a word on her own cause. The second student, Inez Lanier, from a conversation which they had together, has written on the thoughts on which the "teenage mind" rests. They plan to write additional articles on various subjects in the future.

This article is an open discussion between Inez Lanier and Betty Lou Scarborough concerning the minds of modern teenagers.

In this conversation you will read opinions either those of Presidents Harry S. Truman, life saved with a typewriter or a notebook?

No, the fight for life and freedom was won through human fundamentals.

School doesn't teach this, for it comes from the heart from earliest childhood. The worn out statement, "If I were born again," is beginning to bear a faint ring to us. If we were born again, 95 per cent of the adults would be right where they are or even a little further along the line.

Adults have tremendous problems to deal with, but at times they aren't born again the need of living faster and of getting their full education.

Adults are always worrying on the fast track, which increases as we are keeping today. The reason is that with the world in its present condition they do not know what tomorrow will bring. We have only one life to live. Teenagers' lives are filled with confusion, mixed emotions unstable happiness, and worries. They are like a bunch of upsets retort: "How a little help."

But do the adults set an example of faith? Why do they get so "hot under their collars" over the war between the United States and Russia? Why aren't they planning for something bigger in the future?

These are a few of the thoughts that pass through a teenager's mind.

Henry Earwood, Co-Chairman with R. Y. Creech, presided at the meeting, which was attended by some dozen other persons in addition to the Committee.

Previous to the formal meeting a dutch supper was enjoyed by the group at Bell's Restaurant.

A date for the formal meeting between the Arco Group and the C & S Flood Control District, and the U. S. Engineers will be agreed upon soon. It is anticipated that the meeting which will be held directly by Luther Jones as Chairman of the State Chamber of Commerce Flood Control Committee, will be held in two sessions—afternoon and night.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Swain and children were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Early and son during the day. The Lindroes have as weekend guests Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Art Warner of Fullerton, California. Mrs. Swain and Mrs. Clark are Mr. Lindroes' sisters.

Vice President Barbara and other high officials of our United States.

Adults seem to think that teenagers have such juvenile minds that they can't understand one subject at a time. Believe it or not, there is more going on in our minds than sitting in parked cars in secluded spots, talking with our friends, or with teenagers, who are developing into adults, are spared the troubles and cares of the world. We feel that this only makes them more difficult to understand.

They plan to write additional articles on various subjects in the future.

TWIN VOCALISTS VISIT ENTERTAINMENT HERE

A team of twin girl vocalists—Joanne and Janis Williams—entertained their way into the hearts of the local public at several programs for local groups during their first visit with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kidder last week.

"Although only 21, the twins have a professional career of which they are the performers, business managers, publicity agents and wardrobe mistresses. They even provide their own transportation, traveling by bus and car, and can often be seen appearing at the after before banquets and school assemblies.

Their programs include western songs and Hawaiian selections and two changes of costumes. They both play Hawaiian guitars.

After completing high school, the dancing eyed brownette will be appearing in the Norman English Studios in Lansing, Mich., near their home in Eaton Rapids.

Their career started when an enthusiastic amateur attended an appearance for the school program in Hillsdale, Mich. Since that start, they have had steady schedules for four years.

After a brief tour of the country, they plan to appear in Pa until June. Next year they will appear on the west coast after which they hope to end their roving and settle down as instructors in the conservatory in which they studied.
